The moving images of a film are created by photographing actual scenes with a motion-picture camera, by photographing drawings or miniature models using traditional animation techniques, by means of CGI and computer animation, or by a combination of some or all of these techniques, and other visual effects. Before the introduction of digital production, film was a physical strip of film consisting of a series of static or still images of live action photographed at the rate of 24 frames or images per second. When the images are viewed at the same rate the illusion of motion is the result of what is called persistence of vision, the fact that the mind cannot process individual images at that speed, so the images merge together to produce the illusion of motion within the image. If the film is an animation of any kind, the widely separated in time images are planned to be seen at the standard speed.

The August 26 release of Tenet marked the first major U.S. blockbuster film to be released theatrically. Due to safety concerns in the United States, the film premiered in 70 international markets through a staggered release model, before being released in select U.S. cities on September 3.112 Its box office revenue had reached 0 million by September 6, 2020, with a modest million in the United States.113 In September 2020, Sony Pictures Entertainment Chairman Tony Vinciquerra stated that the company will not release any big budget films to theatres until the pandemic is over.114 On October 2, No Time to Die was delayed once more to April 2, 2021, due to a requirement for the film to have a worldwide theatrical audience. This came amid continued closures of cinemas in the key U.S. markets of Los Angeles and New York City, as well the reinstatement of restrictions in the United Kingdom due to a second wave.115 As Universal Pictures held the international distribution rights to No Time to Die, its film F9 was delayed to May 28, 2021 Memorial Day weekend as to not cannibalize it.116 No Time to Die has since been postponed again to September 30 in the UK and October 8 in the U.S.117118 In March 2021, F9 was postponed once again to June 25.119
